Bialetti Invents Tazzona, the First Espresso Machine to Incorporate Charm

The creativity of the little moustached man explodes with Bialetti's brand new Tazzona, an electric espresso machine which includes the best of Italy's coffee culture and the authentic spirit of conviviality in a unique, enthusiastic design that shines with originality and an irresistible dose of charm.

Following the success of Mokona, the Moka shaped espresso coffee machine, Bialetti has designed yet another original espresso machine which is shaped like a coffee cup, thereby creating a perfect gift idea featuring zest and good humour.

The original design is combined with functional quality. In fact, Tazzona prepares coffees that can compete with those found in traditional cafes and coffee houses, thanks to the pressure of the 20 bar pump which provides for even more intense and aromatic espressos. Moreover, this espresso machine is equipped with a practical spout that can be used to whip up a milk froth, allowing for the preparation of creamy cappuccinos and lattes.

Bialetti Tazzona features a triple function option: it can be used with ground coffee, paper coffee pods or with Bialetti's coffee capsules, in the creamy Arabic, creamy full-bodied and creamy decaffeinated versions. The espresso maker is easy to use thanks to the presence of a single arm where the coffee is placed, no matter which of the three options is selected.

Tazzona is available in a variety of colours, to better interpret the different ways in which a coffee break can be enjoyed: bright red, elegant black, essential white and black & white for an original combination with a decisive visual impact.

Tazzona will be available in sales outlets at the end of November 2008.
